The John Money Fellowship for Scholars of Sexology was established in 2002 by Dr. John Money. The fellowship is to support graduate students whose scholarly work would benefit from the use of library and archival materials at The Kinsey Institute for Research in Sex, Gender, and Reproduction. Applications are encouraged from all students enrolled in a graduate program in the United States and whose interests concern the history, politics, or methodology of sexology and sexuality studies.

Notes:

Founded by Dr. Alfred Kinsey in 1947, The Kinsey Institute Library and Special Collections now comprise the largest collection on human sexualities in the world. More than 432,000 items make up the collection, including books, periodicals, films, arts, photographs, artifacts, and other unique research materials.

The mission of The Kinsey Institute Library and Special Collections is to collect, preserve, and organize sex research materials as well as historical, culture, and artistic expressions of human sexualities. Thousands of scholars, researchers, students, artists, authors, and journalists now use the collection to further their own work and expose others to this accumulated knowledge of human sexuality—fable, myth, and truth.
